

ENDEAVOR AGAIN BEATS DEFENDER OF 'OLD MUG'

LIBERTY IN PERIL, SAYS JAS. A. REED

Former Democratic U. S. Senator Assailed New Deal

Chicago, Sept. 18.—The Constitution of the United States, upheld yesterday in the nation's capital, is being disregarded by the national administration at Washington in a manner to cause misgivings in the hearts of true Americans and smiles on the faces of the followers of Stalin and Debs.

This was the caustic declaration of James A. Reed, former Democratic United States Senator from Missouri, speaking at Constitution day ceremonies last night in the Court of States at the World's Fair. In a series of short, terse statements Mr. Reed charged that practically every guarantee of the Constitution is being violated by the present administration.

He compared the acts of the New Deal to the acts of bolshevism in Russia. Of the forced surrender of gold by American citizens he asked: "Was there ever so rank a piece of 'brutalized' nationality?"

However, he said, the Constitution still lives, and, with thinking people looking askance at new and radical experiments, will again be the bulwark of American independence.

Cause of Nation's Anxiety
"Strange it is that at this great Fair it should be deemed necessary to devote a day to a defense of the Constitution of the United States," said Ex-Senator Reed in opening his address.

"What is this fear that has sent an ominous chill into the hearts of millions of Americans?"

"Why the anxious look upon the faces of men who understand the fundamentals of our laws?"

"Why do great lawyers and judges and law associations and distinguished patriots raise the danger signal and talk of an invasion of the Constitution?"

"Why are the faces of the followers of Debs and the adherents of Stalin shining with pleasure?"

"Thoughtful people gaze with astonishment at the most radical Socialist of our time is lionized by official Washington, seated cheek by jowl with the highest officials, relieved into full communion and fellowship and adopted into the official family by the declaration of the Federal Relief administrator. 'He is on our side,' and sent home boasting that he had been pledged unlimited pork for California."

GETS NICE WRITE-UP

The National Grocers' Bulletin for August devotes a feature article to A. E. Martin's Dixon Grocery & Market in its new location on Hennepin avenue, the article being illustrated with three views of the store, two of them of the interior arrangement. The story tells of the admonitions the proprietor received when he announced his plan to move to the side street, of an increase of fifty per cent in total volume of business since the removal in June, 1933, of his travels to get the latest ideas in store equipment and arrangement; of the remodeling of the store room throughout; of his policies and progress. The article is very complimentary to the Dixon grocer.

May Repeal Action Toward Building a New Sewage System

A representative of a Chicago engineering firm, which had been retained to draw plans and specifications for the proposed sewage disposal system to be constructed under the city's PWA program, was in Dixon yesterday afternoon consulting city officials. It is understood today that the engineer was informed that a strong sentiment exists in Dixon against the adoption of the proposed improvement, and it was rumored that the city commission is considering action which will result in the repeal of all former plans which will result in the stopping of the sewage disposal system, the estimated cost of which was $285,000.

Rome, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Compulsory military service for Italians, beginning at the age of 8 and continuing to the age of 33, was decreed today by the council of ministers in probably the most sweeping law ever passed in history. Declaring "the functions of a citizen and of a soldier are not divisible in the fascist state," the council created the three following categories of compulsory military training:

(1) Preliminary—Beginning at the age of 8 years;

(2) Military—Beginning at the age of 21 years;

SETTLEMENT OF NRA DIFFICULTY HERE IS SOUGHT

Mayor Expressed Opinion Outsiders Tied Up Local Work

Efforts to effect a settlement with the regional NRA sand and gravel code committee, which will permit the resumption of work at once on the building of 14 blocks of concrete paving in the west end of the city, will be made at a meeting to be held in Chicago tomorrow. Contractor E. M. Rocho of Freeport, who has made trips to both Springfield and Chicago to contact members of the committee, has received no encouraging word which might indicate that the committee had reconsidered its action in ordering operations in Dixon halted because of the charge that E. C. Risley, who had contracted to furnish sand and gravel for the improvement, had violated the code.

Mayor C. C. Dixon last evening told members of the city council of conditions at present and later charged that certain members of the code committee were attempting to prevent local material being furnished for the improvement and were seeking to have the products of deposits controlled by members of the committee shipped to Dixon. In this connection he cited the committee on fair competition for the second district, which is in fact on the local situation, as consisting of the following members:

Members of Committee

E. Guy Sutton, chairman; R. E. Weaver, secretary and treasurer; Stone Industry—A. H. Banister of Moulding-Brownell Corp., Chicago; L. R. Cartwright, Midwest Rock Products Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; J. A. F. Wendt, U. S. Gypsum Co., Chicago; W. N. Cartwright, National Stone Co., Joliet; Myron Edgeworth, Lehigh Stone Co., Kankakee; Harold Graham, Lincoln Crushed Stone Co., Joliet; C. C. Schmoeller, Mississippi Lime & Material Co., Alton; sand and gravel industry—E. Guy Sutton, Neal Gravel Co., Mattoon; R. E. Weaver, Lincoln Sand & Gravel Co., Lincoln; O. J. Ellingsen, H. D. Conkey Co., Mendota; L. A. Hart, Washash Sand & Gravel Co., Terre Haute, Ind.; J. J. O'Laughlin, Consumers Co., Chicago; T. E. McGrath, McGrath Sand & Gravel Co., Lincoln; John E. Sankey, Joliet Gravel Co., Springfield, and L. E. McDermott of the Illinois Slag & Ballast Co., of Chicago in charge of the slag industry.

"It looks to me that the competitors of the local industry have tied up this improvement," Mayor Dixon told the commissioners. All action was deferred until after the meeting in Chicago tomorrow which will be attended by Contractor Rocho, who will attempt to have the ban against the Dixon gravel firm raised.

Police Equipment

Commissioner Cal G. Tyler of the department of public health and safety explained the supplying of the police department with modern crime prevention equipment. He stated that the right economies practiced in the incidentals fund for the police department, together with contributions from private sources had enabled the purchase of equipment for the police. The side arms which have been in use, the commissioner stated, have become obsolete and he expressed his desire that the officers be given at least a 50-50 change in the modern criminals, by furnishing them the latest equipment. He added that he hoped to be able to purchase a Thompson sub-machine gun for use of the department within a few days and that a federal instructor would come to Dixon soon to give members of the police department complete instructions in the use of both the machine gun and gas.

In a communication from George Frain, local auctioneer, the city council was asked to reduce the license fee charged auctioneers, which was drafted and adopted several years ago requiring a fee of $2 for each sale cried within the city limits. The letter stated that in many small sales conducted in the city, those disposing of articles had been citizens and taxpayers for many years. The communication was referred to City Attorney Martin Gannon to inform.

FOUR INDICTED BY GRAND JURY THIS MORNING

Inquisitors Reported to Judge Sheehan in Circuit Court

Three indictments were returned by the grand jury for the September term of the circuit court when that body reported its findings to Judge Frank Sheehan in the circuit court this morning at 11 o'clock. John Ehlman of May township was indicted on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon, his bond being fixed at $2,000. Ehlman at the present time is at liberty under bond.

Robert Bolin and Herbert Jeannat of Ashton were named in another true bill in which both are charged with larceny, and their bonds fixed at $2,000 each. Both are in custody at the county jail since their apprehension several days ago in connection with the robbery of the Ackerson tavern in Ashton.

George Swope of Compton was indicted by the grand jury on a charge of arson, the bond being fixed at $2,000. Swope is alleged to have set fire to his residence in Compton in July and collected insurance for the damage to the house and its contents. His arrest several days ago resulted in an investigation conducted by Walter Farrier, deputy state fire marshal of Peoria, to whom Swope is alleged to have made a confession of his act. Swope also is in custody at the county jail.

Judge Sheehan excused the grand jury after the filing of the findings this morning, subject to being recalled.

EQUITY SUIT IN LOCAL COURT IS BROUGHT TO END

Christ Property Was Deeded Back to Dixon Woman Monday

Attorney Albert E. Icelly of Chicago was in Dixon yesterday and filed in Circuit Court an answer to the complaint in equity proceeding brought by Attorney Freeman Kaufman acting for Esther Carlson, who appears as next friend of Mina Abel of this city.

The answer sets forth that Albert E. Icelly and Ella L. Icelly deny all of the charges of wrong alleged to have been committed in the bill of complaint, and that each and all of the charges are false, untrue, groundless and without foundation; that they never in their life drank intoxicating liquor of any kind and never gave Mina Abel any intoxicating beverages of any kind, and never met Esther Carlson but once in their lifetime and that the latter part of August, 1934, in her frame hotel on First Street in Dixon, and then only for about 15 or 20 minutes, and that they never made any such remarks as she alleges in her bill against F. X. Newcomer, or any other person.

Deny Making Charges

The reply further states that they have always refrained from in any way making any detrimental remarks against any persons and especially in connection with the subject involved in the Walter Christ estate, and that Mr. Icelly has known Mr. Newcomer of this city since boyhood and that he has the highest regard for him and has never had any quarrels nor made any charges with reference to the handling of this estate against him.

The defendants named in the action deny all manner and form of conspiracy, fraud and other alleged commissions in all the matters set forth in the complaint as though the same were answered specifically by a material and competent answer or plea in the case.

The records at the circuit clerk's office indicated that the properties of Walter Christ, were yesterday deeded back to Mina Abel, by the Chicago attorney.

Old Newspaper is Found in Building on Fred Hill Farm

Hill, who was born on the farm and who as a boy helped in its building, and they found a copy of the Dixon Sun of May 24, 1884, which, while torn and somewhat decomposed is of interest. It is noted that on that day A. K. Trusdell offered for sale "the fine farm known as Hazelwood, owned and occupied by the late Governor Charles," that "fish taken out of the river at this point with hook and line will amount to nearly a ton a week;" and that "yesterday afternoon Mr. Geo. S. Beale of Alma, Colo. was married to Miss Hattie Remmers, daughter of the proprietor of the Washington House in this city, the ceremony being performed by Rev. L. L. Lipe of the Lutheran church."

Famous Gold City was Almost Entirely Burned Monday

Nome, Alaska, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Alaska's famous city of gold lay in smoking ruins today, with two dead and a property loss estimated as high as $2,000,000.

Faced by a definite food shortage and an early winter which will lock the city' roadstead with ice, Nome's homeless citizens pleaded for immediate aid from the states. "We must have help from outside, speedily," said Dr. Rex M. Swartz, the city's physician-mayor. The federal government, Red Cross and American companies promptly promised to rush aid in an effort to beat the winter's ice into the harbor.

Started from Spark
Starting from a spark on the roof of the Golden Gate hotel yesterday, flames roared through the wooden town, leaping from building to building and then from block to block. Efforts of firemen, aided by men women and children were futile.

Federal buildings, the Miners & Merchants Bank, every grocery store and restaurant, all of the hotels but one fell before the flames, burned to death.

Buildings were dynamited as the blaze raced today toward Front Street. A number of white persons were injured. At the hospital—one of the few buildings to escape the fire—physicians said several were in a serious condition.

Food Supply Burned
Most of the city's food supply was consumed by the fire—a dire predicament for a city as isolated as Nome which must import all that it eats. Food and material to rebuild the city must be brought in by boat over long rough water journeys from southeastern Alaska or Seattle before ice freezes out all ships six weeks hence. Food may also be flown in by airplane from Fairbanks, half way across Alaska. Dog sled journeys from Fairbanks take months under normal conditions.

Hundreds of Nome's summer population of 1,000 were utterly homeless. In winter time the city has about 1,500 residents.

While some stayed up through the night to watch the fire burn itself out, the remainder crowded into the one hotel, the hospital, warehouse along the water front or the few residences that escaped the conflagration.

Near Freezing Point
The temperature is near the freezing point.

Relief kitchens fed the city temporarily. City officials began a survey, while the embers still glowed, to determine how long the remaining food would last.

Already new supplies were on the way aboard the liner Victoria, due in Nome a week hence.

The coast guard cutter Northland was ordered to put out from Dutch Harbor—nearest Alaska city by water—and speed from the Aleutian Islands to give what aid it could.

Nome, magnet of the world during the great Alaskan and Yukon gold rushes, became a colorful place in history in 1898 when placer miners discovered the yellow metal near the town that was just a collection of shacks.

Strike News of Today Condensed for Quick Reading

(By The Associated Press.)

Over 420,000 textile workers were idle from the general strike in the industry an independent survey showed today as unions and employers made determined moves to strengthen their positions.

In Washington national strike leaders gathered to consider a quick extension of the walkout by calling out every clothmaker in the nation. An additional 100,000 would be affected.

Employers opened many mills and made plans for opening more throughout the textile areas. National Guardsmen stood by to protect property and to guard the "right to work." Additional units were called out in Georgia where martial law is in effect.

Connecticut Quiet
In Connecticut, however, quiet was the order of the day and Gov. Wilbur Cross ordered the National Guard demobilized.

In the Carolinas the number of idle was decreased by several thousand as mills opened under the protection of National Guard bayonets.

In Maine the closing of the Penobscot mills at Biddeford added 4,000 to the idle, while at the Saco mills of the York Manufacturing Company 535 out of 700 were idle.

There was virtually no disorder but likewise little lessening of the tension.

MUST WORK FOR AID
Washington, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Officials of the federal relief administration said today aided bodied textile strikers would have to work for relief payments like any other applicant for aid.

They reported applications from strikers had been received from relief organizations in every state affected by the textile walkout, and that these applications were receiving exactly the same treatment accorded ordinary relief requests.

"The application of strikers are being investigated, like all other cases, to determine if actual need exists," explained one official in close touch with the situation.

"Where relief jobs are available, which needy strikers can fill," he said, "the applicants are being required to work for their relief budget like anybody

Manual Dexterity Is Often Dependent On Early Training

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Manual training means hand training of any sort. We usually apply it to carpenter work but as a matter of fact any practice that leads to control of hand and fingers is manual training.

The Japanese are clever at foot training to the extent even of "toe-writing." Toes are not as facile as fingers but they can be trained to an astonishing degree.

If we never had to use our hands we never could raise a spoon to our mouths after a certain number of centuries hands would become like the modern foot — useless and clumsy as far as control goes.

The pianist practices his scales and stretches difficult chords, not so much to perfect memory, or to loosen tight muscles, as to maintain control or coordination between quick mind and dexterous hand—that delicate relation that the best soon lose without practice.

Hands Get Lazy

Hands get very lazy if they own don't get after them. But it is most important to learn to use hands thoroughly early in life.

The woman who never has learned to hold a needle and a hem at the same time in childhood very likely will find darning difficult in maturity. Even cooking requires thought and handling at the same time. Otherwise it becomes awkward and tedious and is tedious. Any kind of housework is the same.

It happens that children are not allowed to drive cars, and goodness help us if they were! But in out-of-the-way places where children manage to learn to drive "unofficially," they become drivers of marked dexterity. The quick thought, the equally quick hand, ability to grasp situations and react instantly are things that all drivers, alas, do not possess.

Work at Home is Best

Boys who must do carpenter jobs about the house learn to use tools. They learn in school, too, but those permitted to think out their own repair problems and to use the saw, plane, square and hammer develop a hand technique that lasts through life.

One man said recently: "Too few expert engineers can take a hammer and drive a nail straight!" They have knowledge, but they couldn't show a man how to do anything; so he recommended that "scientific" courses teach more real hand and finger work along with their calculus, drafting, and so on. Hand training is an asset in any technical line.

Parents are wise who allow the children to try things. Most of them love it. Later, when the magic urge has gone, you couldn't get them to do it. I imagine the shanty and get them back to it with wild old shed roof have turned out as many good carpenters in the days gone by, as all the manual training courses of the present. And the best housekeepers are those who learned while young to handle needles, irons and spoons.

HAVE'N'T you noticed that your happiest hours occur on days when you feel your best?

Have more of these happy days. You and all your family. Guard health while you have it. Keep on the sunny side of life.

The greatest enemy of health is common constipation. It may cause loss of appetite and energy. Certainly it kills enthusiasm! Yet it can be banished by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" and vitamin B to relieve common constipation. Also iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. How much pleasanter to eat this delicious ready-to-eat cereal than to take patent medicines. Two tablespoons daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

TRAGIC PROMOTION.

Acting Captain William F. Warm's, of the ill-fated Morro Castle, seems to have lived through one of the strangest personal tragedies that any seafaring man could be called on to face.

Here was a man who had won a position as first officer on a large modern steamship. Being human, he was undoubtedly looking forward to the day when he himself might command such a vessel. He was nearing the top of his profession. He had a right to dream his dreams of what would happen when he got to the top of the ladder.

Then, unexpectedly compressed into a few hours, came command—accompanied by the most overwhelming emergency responsibilities that can go with it. His captain dead, he himself put in charge, a sudden fire as mysterious as any in the annals of the sea, the ship lost and scores of passengers dead almost before he had time to realize that the command was his—did any sailor ever pass through a more tragically amazing set of circumstances?

MODEL OF GOOD WILL.

The United States and Canada joined hands recently to dedicate restored Fort Niagara, at the foot of Lake Erie; and while the colorful ceremonies drew much public attention, the whole occasion really should have been impressed on our attention even more strongly.

For this celebration emphasized a familiar but still profoundly important fact; namely, that the long frontier between Canada and the United States has been unfortified for 117 years.

In a world that bristles with international fears and rivalries, here are two great nations so supremely confident that they will keep the peace with each other that they let their joint frontier go entirely undefended.

It is a unique achievement in international relations, and restoration of the old bastions of Fort Niagara is simply a symbol of it. The people of the two nations have a right to be exceedingly proud.

MISPLACED CREDIT.

Either the representatives of munitions manufacturers have a way of taking credit for things they never did, or they sometimes step about ten miles over the bounds of propriety.

The American people have not yet forgotten how William B. Shearer took the glory (or whatever you care to call it) for the wrecking of the Geneva naval conference. Now the Senate investigators find a letter in which Sterling J. Joyner claims the credit for placing of two congressmen on the powerful House Rules Committee in 1928.

It has been asserted that the Geneva conference would have failed even without Shearer's efforts, and it may well be that the two congressmen in question would have got on the rules committee without Joyner's help.

But the whole business leaves a bad taste, in any case. The munitions makers' representatives either claim too much—or do too much.

TALK AVOIDS TROUBLE.

The English seem to have thorough knowledge of the way in which free speech serves as a valuable social safety.

British Fascists had a big mass meeting in London's Hyde Park the other day. Thousand of Fascists paraded; thousands of their sympathizers gathered to cheer them; thousands upon thousands of bitter foes of Fascism gathered to heckle them—and, finally, five thousand bobbies were present to see that no blood was spilled.

There are civic authorities who would have been alarmed at such a demonstration and would have ordered all speeches called off and all mobs dispersed, to prevent trouble. But not the British. They let everybody talk. The bobbies had little or nothing to do. No heads were broken, no noses were punched, and everybody went home happy after it was over.

By letting the discontented talk their heads off, the British very frequently escape serious trouble.

A STRONGER LEAGUE.

News that the council of the League of Nations is ready to welcome Soviet Russia as a member of the league means that this unwieldy and sometimes rather unreal international organization is ready to take a step which should properly have been taken several years ago.

Whatever the league may or may not amount to as an international force, it is at least obvious that it could never realize its full potentialities so long as it excluded one of the strongest nations on earth from membership. With the United States staying out, of its own desire, and Soviet Russia excluded like a card-sharper from an exclusive bridge club, the league was doomed from the beginning to be only partly effective.

Admission of the Soviet union does not, of course, mean that the league will immediately become all that its founders hoped. But at least it will be operating on a sounder basis than it has in the past. Part of its peculiar element of unreality will be gone.

Under the Recovery program we have done more proportionately than any other industry in America has thus far done for its employees.—George Arthur Sloan, head of Cotton Textile Institute.

The monstrous hippo swam real fast. Cried Goldy, "I hope this will last a long, long time. I have never had as nice a ride as this."
"It's just like sailing in a boat. I hope the hippo keeps afloat. Oh, gee, what will we all do, now, if something goes amiss?"
"Oh, stop your fretting. We are all right," said Windy. "You are a Tinymite, and Tines are supposed to be the bravest sort of tots."
"Don't cross your bridges in advance. You'd best not ride, tots, any more. My old pet hippo's getting tired. He's slowing down a bit."
"Sometimes he's stubborn as can be, but I'll try coaxing him to me. Don't try to slide off his back until it's safe. Just sit!"
Then came a very big surprise. Before the bunch could realize what happened, the old hippo jerked and dropped right out of sight.
This left the Tines in the large stream. They shortly heard the hunter scream "just swim ashore. I will build a fire. Then you will be all right!"
Of course, they did as they were told. The fire kept them from getting cold, and also it dried all their clothes. Cried Goldy, "I feel just great!"
The hunter then said, "I've a treat ..... a new friend you will like to meet. I'll get him from my cabin, if you Tinymites will only wait."

Woe Windy said, "Why, sure, we will. We are ready for another big thrill." The hunter walked away and shortly came back into sight.
"Well, look at that," one Tiny cried. "An alligator is by his side. The gator has a uniform and, say, he looks all right."

BARONNESS IS KILLED BY REPULSED LOVER

French Commoner is Suicide Following Murder

Cahors, France, Sept. 17 —(AP)—The spurned love of a commoner for a descendant of one of France's proudest families was given by police today as the motive for a double slaying at historic Chateau d'Aynac.

Raoul Magnat, 35-year-old electrician, authorities said, shot and killed Baroness Bertrande de Sevin, his benefactress, then killed himself. She was 36.

Their bodies were found in the Baroness' bedroom by Guy, her 7-year-old son, Saturday. She lay on the bed, shot through the head, while Magnat was found at the foot of the bed, a pistol in his hand.

Police said they believed Magnat fell in love with Baroness de Sevin, the daughter of Princess Wagram, and killed her in a jealous rage when repulsed. Baron de Sevin was away at the time. Viollette, 4-year-old daughter of the Baroness, told police "Magnat shot mother."

"JES" GOING TO

By Dr. Joseph Fort Newton
Once there was a little girl nicknamed Jess. She was pretty, daintily, with big blue eyes and golden curls, but she had a habit of putting things off.

If her mother told her to do something, she had to go and see if Jess had done it. Nearly always she found that Jess had not done it yet, but was just going to do it.

In school her teacher called her "Miss Jess Going-To," and the name stuck like a burr. Jess was rarely naughty, but naturally lazy and indolent, preferring to push things forward.

But by bit she plucked away the prickles as she grew older, and today she holds a responsible position as secretary to a big business man. She is eyes, ears and memory to him, so he says and he could not do without her.

On her desk is a neatly-framed card saying "Do It Now" not that it is needed any longer, but as a reminder of a time when her tendency was to put everything off.

"If I seem to be energetic," she confessed to a friend, "it is still an everyday fight with my old indolence. Even today I am awfully

Six Arrested for Opening Dog Track

East St. Louis, Ill., Sept. 17 —(AP)—Hearings for six men, arrested in a raid at the reopening of the Cahokia dog track Saturday night and charged with violating the Illinois anti-gambling laws, will be held today at Belleville.

Those arrested and released on bond were Anthony J. Stocker, East St. Louis, former deputy sheriff and Justice of the Peace, said to be the president of the Illinois-Missouri Greyhound Breeders' Association; George L. Kerr, track official; J. P. Gorman, one of the original track promoters, and Edward Beasley, Carl Coffman and Vincent Hysky, employees. Gorman was charged with resisting an officer.

The scheduled 10-race program ended after the first race when deputies raided the betting booths, confiscated paraphernalia and turned off track lights.

Therefore, a more accurate system was needed. By noting the time that certain stars pass the meridian, almost perfect time can be kept.

LIBERTY IN PERIL, SAYS JAS. A. REED

nia; that he had been offered the treasury.

"All classes of people are beginning to appreciate the feelings of a guinea pig as he watches the laboratory attendants prepare for another experiment."

"Can it be that those who have trusted with power, and who were to support and defend the Constitution against all enemies, foreign and domestic, now stand forsworn and are plotting the destruction of the great Magna Charta of our liberties?"

The Alarm Is Sounded
"Glad am I that the alarm has been sounded and that patriots who place country above the spoils of office are flocking to the defense of the Constitution, the flag, and liberty."

"Fortunate it is that we are beginning to realize that the liberties gained by the struggle of the centuries are imperiled, and that the Constitution is the great bulwark of liberty."

"Such the people have regarded it through the triumphs and adversities of our national life. 'Such, please God, it may remain, despite assaults of foreign foes and the conspiracies of domestic traitors.'"

Challenge to Despotism
Mr. Reed then developed the historical view that the Constitution was man's challenge to the despots and paternalistic governments that ruled the earth for thousands of years.

"Universal," he said, "he who seeks despotic power has come claiming he possesses a sovereign remedy for human ills. But in the end the tyrant has struck with an iron hand." He continued:

"The framers of the Constitution had seen enough of paternalistic government—they had studied the pages of history—they knew that power feeds on power, and that when government once asserts the right to control the labor, the property or the habits of the citizens it has entered upon the old and bloody road of despotism."

The former Senator then discussed the main provisions of the Constitution, its divisions and limitations of power and the express limitations in the first ten amendments, all aimed, he said, at the instrumentalities usually employed by paternalistic governments. He went on:

"It is not expected that ever there should be a Congress or a government that would seek to exercise every power not expressly forbidden by the Constitution. On the contrary, the public officers were to be public servants, studiously avoiding all oppressions, injustices, or wrongs."

"Such, however, has not been our governmental policy during these latter days. It has appeared on numerous occasions that in their desire to impose their will upon the people, public officers, like polar bears seeking to escape from a cage, have raged up and down the Constitutional barrier, trying to dig under, crawl over, or to break its bars."

True Purposes Concealed
They have employed granted power for purposes never intended. They have repeatedly recited that a bill is proposed for one purpose when in fact, its real object is concealed behind a false title.

"Notwithstanding all of the attempts to undermine, to avoid, and misconstrue the constitution it still stands. The federal government possesses no power except it be granted by the constitution. It follows that any act outside the power granted is an assault upon the constitution, an usurpation of power, and a crime against the republic."

Mr. Reed then discussed recent acts of the federal government and compared them with the decrees of dictators abroad.

"Russia and the New Deal," he said, "But if it is new it did not altogether originate in the United States."

"The bolshevik government declared that any person owning more than three cows was a capitalist and must surrender his cows to the state."

"The administration declares that if you have more than $100 in gold and silver, you will be sent to the penitentiary."

"The injustice in each case is the same. The charge of the grosser cruelty rests upon our government."

"Our constitution provides no citizen's property shall be taken except by due process of law and for just compensation rendered."

10 Per Cent and in Paper
"The citizen forced to surrender his gold dollars was paid in paper representing 49 per cent of the gold taken from him, and the government, with hypocritical and smiling countenance, boasts that it made two billion eight hundred million dollars by the transaction."

entitlary. They were a bewildered lot. They did not know what had happened. They only knew that they did not want to go to prison. Above the line hung the smiling, kindly face of the President.

"It is useless to disguise the enormity of this offense. The highwayman meets you on the road. He presses a pistol to your head and demands your purse. You yield to force. He divides your money, and takes half for himself. Is he any the less a highwayman? Do we not imprison or hang such wretches?"

"This crime seems to me of a worse nature. The highwayman was under no obligation save to observe the law."

Appointed to Protect People
"Our officials at Washington were not only under the duty to obey the law, but to act as the protectors of the law and of the people."

"The bolshevik government declares that it will employ no force to compel its peasants to turn their property over to agricultural associations and participate in the common benefit. The transaction, it pretends, is purely voluntary. But if the peasant does not comply, he is compelled to pay three or four prices for everything he must buy in the market."

Free the Cotton Planter
"Our benefactor government likewise declares that the cotton planter is free to raise as much cotton as he pleases. But if he raises a bale more than ordered by his bureaucratic Washington boss, he is robbed by a confiscatory tax collected by force."

"Other American farmers are blandly told that they do not need to agree to limit their crops. They can plant as much as they please, but if they will submit to limitation by the government, they will be paid for not planting, and by force collect, from the people of the country the money paid the farmers for lessening the food supply of the people."

"Where in the constitution is it laid down that the government may tax A in order to bribe B not to work?"

Rate of the Manufacturers
"In Russia private manufacturing was destroyed, and the government largely took over that business, insisting that it would reduce prices and free the people from what it alleged had been previous monopolistic exactions."

In the United States, the government compels the manufacturers to reduce the hours of labor, to increase wages, and to sign agreements under which they have limited their production and vastly increased prices, thus fostering monopoly, limiting production, increasing prices to the consumer, destroying competition and depriving the owners of the right to manage the business they created—all this, without any compensation whatever."

The mandate of the government boiled down to this: No longer shall any man be the proprietor of the business his genius and toil created."

His Fixing of Working Hours
"Infinitely worse is the assumption of the power to regulate the hours men may work."

"When the government compels the employer not to give employment more than 30 hours a week, it in effect decrees that labor must not work more than 30 hours a week. If the power exists to compel a man not to work more than thirty hours, the same power may compel him to work many more hours."

"The wise men now say there is overproduction. May not the same, or other bosses, sometime say there is underproduction, and order labor to work oppressively long hours?"

Time was when paternalistic government compelled its labor to work 12 and 14 hours each day. The dictator in Italy is even now compelling the people to work long hours."

"I warn the laborer that here is a two-edged sword which may cut into his own vitals and strike at the heart of his liberty."

The Excuse of Emergency
"The excuse offered by those who passed these infamous laws and issued these outrageous decrees is that we are confronting an emergency, and that whenever there is an emergency the constitution ceases to be of force."

"That doctrine means that at any time a majority of congress declares an emergency, the constitution ceases to exist—it is a dead thing."

"If all of the rights, the privileges and immunities of that sacred document can be wiped out by a resolution of the two houses of congress, then we have no constitution."

MILLS ATTACK
New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The New Deal, said Ogden L. Mills Monday, is "old, old, deal, dealt, from a pack thumbed by the fingers of countless kings, despots and tyrants all down the centuries."

"We are sacrificing our birthright without even getting the mess of pottage the former secretary of the treasury asserted in a Constitution Day address before the Women's National Republican Club."

He called Hugh S. Johnson "the grandmaster of the revived guilds and monopolies" and declared America must choose between dictatorship and democracy.

"Today," he said, "the federal government in effect tells the wage earner what he may earn and how long he may work; the farmer what and how much he may produce on his farm; the merchant at what price he may sell his goods; the manufacturer what addition he may make to his plant and how much he may produce; the well owner how much oil may flow. It controls the flow of capital and savings. It has entered into business in competition with its citizens."

"Nowhere in the Constitution are these immense powers even suggested."

Planned economy, he said, "is not working," continuing: "The clumsy hand of government—the right frequently not knowing what the left is doing—are halting the existing mechanism and throttling the normal forces that should be working for recovery. To move ahead there must be a sense of direction. This country is being reformed in every direction. It isn't moving in any."

LIBERTIES SURRENDERED

Chicago, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Major John L. Griffith, Athletic Commissioner for the Big Ten, declared in a speech today that the American people to blame "others" for their economic troubles was the philosophy of "quitters."

Griffith, who is president of the Chicago Rotary Club asserted that the "New Deal" has cost personal liberty.

He said: "Evidence shows conclusively that in recent months we have given up some of the liberties that our fathers bequeathed us for promised economic security. x x x We have gone a long way to the left."

Opponents to the "capitalistic school of thought," the Big Ten director said "want some one to feed them out of a spoon."

"We tasted defeat in 1929," he said. "I am trying to understand whether the American people can take a licking and come back fighting, or whether they will turn yellow, blaming others for their disasters, and looking for an easy way out of their difficulties."

Blaming "poor officiating" for a part of the economic troubles, Major Griffith said bankers in New York State had been permitted to follow "principles now condemned," and said the governor of New York was the chief culprit.

Daily Health Talk

TREATING WOUNDS

The emergency treatment of accidental wounds calls for four things—to stop hemorrhage, to treat shock, to render the wound aseptic (surgically clean) and to put the affected part at rest.

In order to minimize the damage suffered and to facilitate healing, there are certain things which should, and other things which significantly should not, be done.

Thus, the wound should be rendered as clean as possible. In the process of cleansing it, one should avoid tissues. Hence, the part surrounding the wound should be washed and scrubbed, when necessary, with soap, brush and sterile water.

In case grease or fatty substance is upon the skin surrounding the wound, either by grease or by dirt, it should be removed. Following this the skin around the wound may be painted with iodine.

Following the cleansing of the surrounding territory, the wound itself may be cleansed with soap, gently wiped with sterile gauze and irrigated with sterile water. Water can be made sterile by boiling it previous to use.

In case of crush or puncture wounds, hydrogen peroxide may be used as a cleansing solution. One should bear in mind in treating the raw flesh that strong chemical disinfectants are apt to do more damage to the tissue than to the germs lodged therein. Hence, to the extent possible, they should be avoided, soap and water being employed in their stead. Particularly should carbolic acid solutions be avoided as a wet dressing, because they may produce gangrene.

Hemorrhage should be checked, if extravasated blood (blood which has escaped from its proper vessels) makes a good medium for the growth and development of germs.

As important as any of the foregoing measures is immobilization of the affected part as promptly as possible.

IT WOULDN'T BE HARD, GETTING BROKEN IN

The prices were just as marked on the jackets; no cut rates at the Bay Tree. And the china was plainly labelled, too. Oh, if anyone should happen to inquire about the secretary—people always were although nothing seemed to come of it—it was $235. And a bargain, too. Pure Chippendale. Now she was going to flop on the couch and Boots could call her if anything vital happened.

It was simple as that. In 15 minutes Boots Land was in charge of the Bay Tree. She was a little dazed by the suddenness of it. This pleasant, book-lined room, smelling of wood smoke from the deep old fireplace, would surely melt away and she would find herself in Lucy's, frantically running from one task to another on burning, aching feet. . . . Meantime the big door opened and closed once or twice and an elderly man and two serious, be-speckled women went away with their packages under their arms, and Frances Gwatrye slumbered in the little back room with the gas ring.

At noon she emerged with one chaise longue, the other and bright, birdlike eyes half-open, like a child who has slept long and well.

"Now you run out and have a bite," she instructed. "The tea-coons around here are possible, I'll say that for them. Try Helen Dupuy's, two doors up. Tuesday's lamb curry. You'll adore that. But Masterston said he would be in around 1:30. He'll want to see you."

Boots obediently went to Helen Dupuy's, liking it instantly with its scrubbed deal tables and white-coated Japanese waiters hurrying back and forth with smoking dishes. She couldn't, she reminded herself, afford a 50-cent luncheon every day. But it was fun to celebrate today. . . .

SHE had taken "Anthony Adverse" with her and now, with the blue bowl of soup steaming in front of her, she propped it up and began hungrily to read. This was life as she had dreamed it should be and as it had eluded her through the years; books and work that suited one and pleasant people to know. . . .

Pleasant people! Through the type, Denis's dark, brooding face with its slanting eyes, looked at her. She had to be grateful to Denis for giving her this opportunity. Grudgingly she admitted it. But never, never, would she forgive him for the slight he had put upon her on Sunday. . . .

"Hello!" Edward Van Selver, big, brown, prosperous and handsome in well-fitting dark tweeds, smiled down at her.

She moved aside on the oaken bench, clearing the book "Hedlow." "I rang you up Sunday night but you weren't in. Nobody was," Edward said, taking the chair opposite. "Where you been keeping yourself anyway? Haven't seen you since I got back from the cruise?"

She had been avoiding Edward and she had been stupid to do it. He was a friend to cling to, honest and good and dependable. Not thrilling, maybe. But then you couldn't expect thrills always. You couldn't expect that painful restriction of the heart and chest—you didn't want to experience it every time a man spoke to you.

She told him about the new job and Edward was a satisfactory audience.

"No kidding!" Edward marvelled. "That's great. You'll be a knock-out in the shop. Suits you."

His praise, his enthusiasm warmed her. She hadn't half-expected Edward before. She was always expecting him to live up to some impossible ideal; to be clever and gay and exciting, all at once. Now she found his obvious admiration very soothing. Something in her wounded pride rose to meet it.

"Look, why don't we dine together tonight?" Edward wanted to know. "And do a show—something like that?"

She had avoided him before because he had shown signs of a deeper interest. Now she welcomed this. Anything to make her forget that mocking gaze of Denis Penway. . . .

BURT MASTERSTON came into the shop just after she returned from luncheon and spoke to her briefly. Would $30 a week be all right, he wanted to know? It was what the other girl had got.

Thirty dollars was all right, Boots told him demurely, with her eyes veiled to hide the involuntary sparkle of delight. He went away and Frances Gwatrye said to her, "He likes you. Not many people like him. He's rather a bear. I know him so well; he went to college with my old brother, Bill."

"He's very nice," Boots said. But it was not of Burt Masterston she was thinking. He had said, "Frances says you have the goods. I hope he's right." He had smiled, and so the words hadn't sounded harsh. So the day went by on winged feet. Boots flew back to her room at six o'clock to dress. The Bay Tree stayed open until nine o'clock only on Saturdays. Edward was coming for her at seven.

But first she must write to Denis. However she might feel about his treatment of her, there were the necessities to consider. Denis had got her this job and she owed him acknowledgment, at least.

"Thank you so much for speaking to Mr. Masterston about me. I started at the Bay Tree today. I like it."

She signed her name. What a stiff little note! She stared at it in dissatisfaction, beginning another.

"Dear Denis: P. S. I got the job. Thanks a lot."

No, that wouldn't do. That was too flippant. Denis hated flippancy. His perceptions were so delicate. He would frown over that one.

This was the letter she might not write, might never send to him: "My dearest: Everything I did today was colored with thoughts of you. Every time a man approached me on the street my heart leaped because I thought it was you. I was angry at you Sunday. You hurt me very deeply. But I know it wasn't you, really. It was something outside yourself. I am working at the shop and liking it. Thank you and bless you for that. . . ."

She tore the sheet in little strips, tore them across once more. What utter madness!

Mrs. Moore put her head in the door. "Your young man's here."

Boots started to her feet. Poor Edward! She had completely forgotten him!

ILLINOIS FARMS CAN HAVE OWN SHELTER BELTS

Forester at University of Illinois Points
Out Benefits

Urbana, Ill., Sept. 18.—Shelter-belts for certain sections of Illinois would be just as beneficial to individual landowners and to the state as the newly-approved 100-mile-wide Federal shelterbelt will be to the country as a whole, says L. E. Sawyer, extension forester of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

In the national project, the lines of trees will extend from the Canadian border to the Texas panhandle, but the things it will do for the entire middle west could be done on a smaller scale on individual farms throughout Illinois, and the beneficial results would be felt throughout the entire state.

A shelterbelt around the farm home, if not around the entire farmstead, points out Sawyer, will make it a much more desirable place in which to live, as the presence of the belt of trees will break the velocity of the wind both in winter and summer. In the warm months, checking of the velocity of the wind will have a cooling effect on the surrounding territory. The presence of the trees will increase the humidity and, in many instances, the trees can be planted so as to aid in the control of soil erosion.

In the wintertime, the line of trees will supply a number of benefits. The velocity of the bitter, cold winds will be decreased, the home will be easier to heat and at less expense, and the barn and other buildings will be more liveable for the livestock.

Establishing a shelterbelt is neither a difficult nor an expensive task, when undertaken on the scale that would be required for the average Illinois farm, Sawyer explains. Neither does such a shelterbelt require a large area of land that could possibly be used to better advantage for other purposes. The land that is required and the necessary expense involved would be more than offset by the added value to the farm and the improvement in the living conditions.

FRANK PRIEBE'S WEEKLY LETTER to POULTRY RAISERS

Even the hens are working better since the weather turned cooler. Probably you have noticed that yours are laying better than they did. And the increase in the price of eggs is quite as welcome as the increase in production.

You have been told that you might expect a good price for both poultry and eggs this fall—and fall is here.

What are you getting? Not as much as you'd like, I know. Chickens have to bring a dollar apiece before we are really satisfied. But if we look back to last fall, we can be very well pleased with the market now, because eggs are worth 6 and 7 cents a dozen more than a year ago. That means about two dollars more on a case, which makes quite a difference.

Just how high eggs will go this fall, I can't say. I do know this: When eggs are worth a quarter in the country, they are pretty expensive by the time they get to a grocery store in the city.

Already people seem to be backing away from eggs just a little bit, and the editors of food pages in the city papers are talking about printing one-egg cake recipes.

Prices Can't Soar

So you realize that the buying public won't stand much of an increase. From our standpoint, it may look like pure stubbornness on their part. But it isn't. The working man's wages have not gone up enough so that he can afford to pay much more for food.

And when one food gets too expensive, people simply quit using it and buy something else.

We have had a very good illustration of that the last month.

The last two weeks in August the wholesale price of pork went up 10 cents a pound. And the first two weeks in September it turned around and went down 10 cents a pound. So now it's right back where it was a month ago.

When the price of any food goes up that fast, people are bound to notice it—and object to it.

That's just what happened. Pork got too expensive and people quit buying it. They bought something that was cheaper.

As a matter of fact, what they bought was chicken!

And that kept the price of poultry from dropping as rapidly as it usually does this time of year. As a result, you have been getting a 5 cent a pound more for your chickens than you did a year ago.

Sometimes we don't realize how good a market we have until we dig back into last year's records and find out what we were getting then.

Get Hens into Production Quickly

I am sure of one thing: If you want to have eggs to sell at the peak of prices this fall, you will have to begin feeding your hens properly at once—if you aren't already doing it.

Flocks, in general, are probably in as poor condition as they ever have been. So it will take several weeks to get them back into production. I advise you not to waste any time doing it.

Sincerely yours,

Bible Helped this

Farmer Keep Land

Until the Harvest

Milwaukee, Wis. —(AP)—"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," says the Bible, and Judge Joseph E. Cordes, who consults it often before handing down decision, is of the same mind.

And that is why John Sentes continues to occupy a small farm near the city limits and will until harvest time.

Arthur E. Koghan, owner of the 12-acre plot Sentes is farming, brought action claiming that Sentes had said uncomplimentary things about the land when prospective purchasers visited it. Later, ordered to move, he refused. Koghan said.

VISIBLE GRAIN SUPPLY

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: wheat decreased 3,549,000; corn increased 1,465,000; oats decreased 137,000; rye decreased 367,000; barley increased 1,063,000.

REDUCING THE COST OF

CORN HUSKING

(By Harold Morris)

In husking corn we find that it costs less to pick corn with a two row picker pulled by a two or three plow tractor than a one row picker pulled by a tractor or horses. The advantages of a two-row picker are: It picks two rows at a time; saves more corn; takes less time per acre and the picker weighs about the same. The advantages of the tractor pulling a two-row picker: burns about one-half as much gas as a tractor pulling a one row picker (per acre); takes just one-half as much time as a one row picker. This is an advantage to pasture the fields before the cold weather arrives.

For small acreage it isn't worth while hiring or buying a picker to do the work. It is cheaper to pick by hand labor. While one man runs the picker in the field another man may haul the corn to and from the field to the elevator. One man can do this alone but it is easier to do the work with two men because of the time saved.

A two row picker pulled by a tractor is faster and more economical than a single row picker pulled by horses or a tractor, because it goes just twice as fast. A two row power take-off tractor pulled picker with a large tank on the picker is best, providing the fields are not soft. A picker of this kind must be pulled by a three-plow tractor because it is a much larger and heavier picker than most two row pickers.

The entire floor should be made with a dense, workable mixture containing sufficient portland cement and sand mortar to finish well and provide a watertight surface.

Like many others, this improvement may be made with one of the Federal Housing Administration loans available to farmers on a seasonal repayment plan at authorized lending agencies.

BARN FLOOR OF CONCRETE BEST IN EVERY WAY

Considered a Worthwhile
Improvement for Any Farmer

A concrete barn floor adds to the efficiency and value of the modern farm. Ratproof and sanitary, it is a desirable improvement.

The area to be concreted should first be freed of all rubbish and the surface filled in and tamped to the required level, allowing for a 5-inch thickness of concrete. The concrete may then be laid directly on the earth if the building is located on high ground or if the drainage under the floor is good. Otherwise, a 6-inch fill of cinders, clean gravel or crushed stone tamped in place and drained with several lines of tile is recommended.

Drainage Important

In order to assure proper drainage, levels should be located so that litter alleys will be practically on a level with the doorsills, with a slope of 1 inch toward the gutter so that water will not stand on them. Stall partitions should also have a fall of 1 inch from manger to gutter. A lengthwise slope in mangers and gutters equivalent to 2 inches in 50 feet is desirable so that these may be flushed out.

For convenience in placing the concrete and finishing the surface, the floor is usually built in strips or sections, with forms made of 2 by 4's or 2 by 6's set on edge and held firmly in place by stakes. Care must be taken in setting the forms so that their top edges can be used as guides in striking off the concrete and bringing the surface to the proper level or slope. Forms for curbs and gutters should be of smooth lumber carefully set to the correct grade.

The entire floor should be made with a dense, workable mixture containing sufficient portland cement and sand mortar to finish well and provide a watertight surface.

Like many others, this improvement may be made with one of the Federal Housing Administration loans available to farmers on a seasonal repayment plan at authorized lending agencies.
